What tho' the green leaf grow?
'Twill last a month and day;
In all sweet flowers that blow Lurks Death his slave Decay.

But if my lady smile
There is no Death at all;
The world is fair the while—What tho' the red leaf fall?

BY GEORGE HUNTINGTON.

"On the day noted in the sketcher's yesterday, she had spent the afternoon with a young fellow named Fenn and a girl called Holloway, a picturesque little raven-haired girl, who called Indian Woods, a mile or more from her home. Her usual body-guard accompanied her.

"As they came out of the Hollow, the spied a sleeping tramp stretched on a log under a bank, and he was for ever with him. The frightened maiden cousin was for flight. But Miss Evans silenced both and drew out her sketch book, reconnoitred for a favorable point of view, seated herself on a convenient stone, and proceeded to represent the unconscious vagabond so accurately as to have him under order to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth about him. It was investigator without delay.

"I was in the office at 10 o'clock. The case would probably be reached by eleven. Why could I not have known this sooner? Two hours was wasted something. At any rate, I resolved to find the owner of the book, learn the nature of her connection with the client and, if necessary, get the truth. I responded till I could use her testimony to advantage.

"Hurry to the Union Station. I ordered the package—y, a bright, rather gentlemanly little fellow, but disposed to be communicative on subjects of interest.

"Yes, a young lady had spoken to me about a lost sketch-book. Did he know her name? He guessed it was Miss Eve duction to Dr. Evans. We visited Pigeon Hollow and the Indian Woods together, and secured diagrams and measurements.

"A few days later the trial took place. The frame was shown; likewise the sketch, which was carefully compared with the original. Miss Evans and her cousin made oath to the correctness of the date and hour mentioned; and the jury unanimously agreed that the prisoner could not at one and the same time have been fast asleep in Pigeon Hollow and committing highway robbery two miles away."

"I hope the man was 'worth saving,'" I said.

To add to their inconvenience, we had to take on board fifty men whose schooner was crushed by the ice a few miles away. All the third of the value of a cargo of seal was lost, the hunters and the ship getting the remainder. Our stores of pelts would fetch about $120. —Again is it our sad duty to record the death of an old and greatly respected citizen of Stanstead. On Thursday afternoon the Rev. M.
McDonald was released from the sufferings of the body and went to join the Master Whom he loved so well, and Whom he had served so faithfully for many years. Mr. McDonald had been ill during the past few months, sometimes bearing bravely much pain. The funeral was held on Saturday at the Methodist Church, and was attended by the members of Golden Rule Lodge, No. 5, of which the deceased was Chaplain, his brother Odoifellows and a large number of his friends. The bereaved family have our most sincere and heartfelt sympathy in this their time of affliction.

—The dinner of the Alumni Association of Stanstead Wesleyan College, given at the Derby Line Hotel on the 19th, was a grand success—beyond the most sanguine expectations of its promoters. About 75 of the former teachers and students met to pass judgment on the tempting viands spread before them. The menu was excellent, under the skillful management of Capt. Foster. The toasts were eloquently and feelingly responded to; and the first annual dinner closed by all present joining hands and singing "Auld Lang Syne." These pleasant gatherings will be held every year hereafter, and the members of the Association are confident that the interest in them will increase year by year.

—Dr. Rugg has opened his office at the Stanstead Hotel for the present.
—The solemn distribution of prizes took place at the Ursuline Convent here Tuesday forenoon. The graduates are Miss Lavina Burke, of Derby Line, Misses Ella O'Rourke, Miss Mary Bushnell, of Rock Island, Miss Helen Johnson, of Magog, and Miss Rose Marshall, of Stanstead Plain.
—The streets through the village are receiving much needed repairs, especially the culverts.

—A lot of new and second-hand Books for sale cheap at the TIMES office. Books in sets will be sold on the monthly or weekly instalment plan to responsible persons.
—Work has been begun already on the Fair Grounds. Fifty extra stalls are to be built, the capacity of the grand stand doubled, and a band stand erected. The directors intend making the second annual Exhibition and Races the largest and best ever held in these parts, and in their efforts for success they need the hearty co-operation of the people of all the surrounding country, and we doubt not but that this co-operation will be given by the majority—we hope for success to the exhibition, since a successful exhibition means much to the business of Stanstead Plain and vicinity.

—The bicyclers were recently entertained by Mr. J. T. Flint, of Derby Line, to a black bass dinner at his summer residence at Lake Park.
—Mr. Harry Thompson, brother of the Clerk of the Court, is in town.
—Mr. Chichey of Sherbrooke, was present at the Convent exercises on Tuesday.
—A few bound volumes of "Allen Quatermain," by H. Rider Haggard, and conceded to be one of his best productions, can be found at the Times office, and will be sold cheap.
Price only 40 cents each.

—The Convocation of S. W. College took place in the lecture room at the Methodist Church Wednesday afternoon last, and was largely attended. The exercises were well arranged and excellently rendered. The graduates in Music were Misses Hop-kirk, Mansur, Kelsey, Chambers and Moulton. Misses Hopkirk, Reid and Kelsey received the degree of M. E. L. The degree of M. L. A. was conferred upon Misses Robinson, Chambers, Arnold, Adams, [advance], and Mansur. The Commercial graduates were Misses M. Reid and J. Brack, Messrs. W. P. Baxter, Austin Blount, C. R. Davis, Leslie Bartlett, C. F. Boynton, Ed. Hovey, C. Shufelt, E. Jenkins, C. H. Mansur, and Chas. Bigelow. Prizes were ar-warded as follows: Miss Arnold, in English Literature, the Works of Shakespeare; Mr. C. H. Mansur, in Mathematics, Shakespeare's Works; Miss Alice Robinson, Latin, George Eliot's Works; Miss Ida Chambers, French, George Eliot's Works; W. P.
Baxter, Commercial, the Channell Prize, Dickens's Complete Works.
Certificates of Honor were presented to Misses Ida Chambers, L. Moody, Ethel Gale, Alice Robinson, Idalia Reid, Katherine Robinson, Maimie Mansur and M. McDuffie, Messrs.
Austin Blount, Walter Baxter and Charles Mansur. A large number of persons were present at the Reunion in the evening, and thoroughly enjoyed the pleasant time. Refreshments were provided for the guests.
Parsons' Cornet Band discoursed sweet music, with much effect towards making successful the last of College's series of entertainments.

—Our Brave Boys' have gone into camp at Sherbrooke. The troops are fine, with full ranks—not full soldiers.
—The Rev. A. B. Chambers preached his farewell sermon last Sunday. He leaves for Napanea, Ont., his new field of labor, this (Wednesday) afternoon, with his family, amid the regrets of their many friends.
—An afternoon train for the accommodation of the people of this vicinity was put on Monday. It leaves this station at 4:10 p. m., for Newport, connecting with the N. Y. Express for Montreal and northern points on the C. P. R. Returning with Mail train after arrival of the steamers from points on the Lake.

—Messrs. R. C. Parsons and Charles H. Kathan have returned from their fishing tour.
—Mr. H. S. Haskell has placed a fine steam yacht on the Lake. Captain Foster also runs a steam yacht for pleasure of the guests of the Derby Line Hotel.

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL

Probably the most useful and complete dictionary ever published. It contains more than 100,000 words, and is difficultly written in still other cases the meaning of the words is explained in and of the uneducated, but of many of the most valuable Webster's Practical Dictionary attempts to explain the meaning of the words in a simple and easy manner. It is an entirely new work, and the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged and Century dictionaries have been able to offer the advantages of a lifetime's experience.

TO KEEP MOTHS AWAY.

To preserve goods from moths do not use camphor in any form. Pieces of tar paper laid in fur boxes and in closets are a better protection. Five cents will buy enough to equip all the packing boxes and closets of a large house for a year.

Ingrain carpets need to be shaken often than Brussels, as from their more open weave

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

As every mother knows, the health of her children is of the greatest importance, and that the best way to secure it is by giving them the best food and the most careful attention. It is a well known fact that the health of a child is largely determined by the quality of the food it eats, and the care with which it is prepared. It is, therefore, the duty of every mother to see that her children are given the best food, and that it is prepared in the most careful manner. It is also the duty of every mother to see that her children are given the most careful attention, and that they are kept in the best of health.

The Berlin Tagblatt says that the Empress Victoria sent to the Dowager Empress Augusta, at Baden, on Friday, the following telegram: "She who was so proud and happy to be his wife weeps with you, poor mother for the loss of your only son. No mother ever possessed such a son.
Be strong and proud in your sorrow.
Only to-day he desired to be remem-

The New York Tribune, the weekly organ for German revolutionists in America, contains a bitter article by John Most against the late Emperor Frederick and his son, the president. The gist of the article is that the German people have been cruelly treated by their late ruler and his ancestors, and it is certain that the present ruler will not show more clemency to offending subjects than his father and grandfather showed.

London, June 22.—Emperor William's reply to President Carnot's telegram of condolence is accepted as a further pledge of the Pacific intentions on the part of the new Prussian king. Further than this, it is said in Paris that the Emperor has hinted that it would be agreeable to him and useful to the relations of France and Germany if no change were made in the French embassy in Berlin. He declared that M. Herbet, now representing the Republic at the Prussian Court, is a person gratia in the highest sense of the word. While this attitude naturally gives great satisfaction to the French Government, it is not believed entirely serious, and every one agrees that the expressions of the Emperor William must be taken with a good deal of salt, and that although he is endeavoring to make a favorable impression in accordance with the universal admiration of the Emperor Frederick's policy which he finds to obtain on all hands, his actions will speak louder than his words, and must be received as a true indication of his purposes.

M. Jules Simons has written an article on this strain, which is the talk of the day. In this after enlarging the peaceful mind of the dead Kaiser, he asks: "How can his son, who grew up amid war's reverses, be otherwise than ill disposed towards as for the time being? He is monopolized by Prince Bismarck, whose policy is splendid. At present he probably is inclined toward peace, but his idea of peace is to make it subservient to the ends of war. He has a way of his own of diminishing and weakening the power of France by prolonged peace to the same extent as she would be weakened and diminished by disastrous war. He has compelled us, during the last eighteen years, with a smaller population than we had before, to keep up an army equal in strength to the German army, which is disproportionately large. In the same way, and to the same end, he allies himself with every possible power that can be arrayed on his side. This is peace, he says. What can France do, encompassed on every side by this circle of iron?"

WOMAN AND HOME.

LIFE OF THE TENEMENT HOUSE BABY DURING THE HOT SEASON.

Rules for the Young Housewife—Women in Literature—The Voice of Children—Marriage—Crime's Beginnings—A Drink for Baby—Odds and Ends.

But how fares it with the baby of the tenement?

The tenement baby, like its aristocratic compeer, awakes early in the morning, too. It is awake at dawn and then dozes off into fretful sleep again. It awakens at short intervals during all the first part of the night and roused its tired, impatient mother with its peevish wailing. Its lips are parched and its thin hands hot; its eyelids but half closed. It rolls its head now and then in a feeble way. It seems consumed with heat, but when its mother puts a spoonful of water between its lips the weakened stomach refuses to take the liquid.

The father, worn with his day's toil, is angered at the suffering innocent disturbing his sleep. Harshly, perhaps, he chides his wife for not lushing the child. She gives to it an empty breast from which it turns with renewed wailing. Then she tries another expedient. She hastily prepares some milk and water and feeds the baby a few spoonfuls. She knows it is good milk. Did she not buy it herself of Jacob, who keeps four cows in a rear shed, and sells the lactated fluid they supply so much cheaper than she can get it of a milkman? To be sure the poor kine stand day after day, from week's end to week's end, from one month to another, in the same stalls almost knee high in offal. But she is certain it is good milk, real cow's milk, for did she not see Jacob milk the cows?

So she gives it to her baby, trotting it up and down on her knees the while. It is teething, and the summer heat makes it ill. She is so worn that scarcely can she keep her weary eyes open till she has finished feeding her offspring. Then she takes it back into the bed occupied by herself and the father. He turns over as she lies down, and testily "hopes the young 'un will keep still, now it's got its stomach full."

Scarcely has the mother fallen asleep before another cry arouses her. The milk and water put down the little one's throat has been rejected by its stomach. Again she rises and turns up the wick of the smoking kerosene lamp. She dandles the child up and down, for she knows not what to do to quiet it.

Its wailing disturbs other inmates of the tenement. Out of a window a neighbor woman puts her head and calls to her:

"Reach out your hand," she says; "I've got a bit of medicine that will quiet the baby."

She gives her a bottle and bids her administer a half teaspoonful. It is a brown liquid, and has a strange smell. She gives it to her infant unhesitatingly. Then it falls into a heavy sleep that lasts till dawn. When it awakes it frets, but it does not always fret. Its eyes are heavy and have a glazed look.

"Th' children's eyes always do look bad when they're teething," says an old dame who comes in to borrow a half cup of sugar.

The tenement baby's hands and face are not sponged when it awakes. Its mother is very busy getting breakfast. Instead of fresh breezes the odor of sizzling salt pork comes to the nostrils of the sick infant. The father, or an older child, feeds it crackers and water "to keep it quiet" until the morning meal is on the table. The mother sits down with it in her lap. It gets now and then a "bite of potato" or a "sip of coffee," for it is a hand-fed baby.

The flies buzz around it, covering its soiled robe and lighting on its feverish mouth.

Some time during the day its mother will wash the hand fed, tenement baby and change its clothing if she has the garments. She will tell her neighbors that she cannot keep it clean, for "its victuals will not stay down."

Thus the tenement baby frets and frets through the summer days. If by chance an unusual allowance of constitution carries it through, it is with diseased digestive organs which may affect its life.

The tenement house, hand fed baby may be a worthless drunkard or a criminal, because during the first three years it lived it was half starved for food and fresh air.

The tenement house, hand fed baby may be a corpse before half the summer is run, because it was quite starved for proper food and the blessing of heaven, which should be free and easy to get—fresh air.—Chicago News.

Steamship Nomenclature.

A study of steamship nomenclature disclose some rather interesting facts. The Guion line boats favor the names of territories, and hence we have the Alaska and the Arizona. The names of the Cunard liners all end in "ia"—for example, the Servia and the Etruria. The Oregon was built, with the Alaska and Arizona, to be leased to the Guion line, but she was acquired by the Cunard line, and broke the spell so far as both name and record were concerned. The White Star boats include the Republic, the Britannic and the Celtic—all the names terminating with "ic." The Anchor line favors the "ja" terminal, and most of the steamship companies follow a hard and fast rule in selecting names for their boats, any exception being accounted for by the purchase of a particular vessel from another line.—Globe-Democrat.

Toothache Superstitions.

In some parts of Sussex, England, there is a superstition that if you put on your right stocking, right shoe and right trouser leg before the left you will never have toothache. To drink out of a skull taken from a graveyard, to take a tooth from such a skull and wear it round the neck, to apply the tooth to your own living but aching tooth, to put a double nut into your pocket, to pare your finger nails and toe nails, and wrap the parings in a paper—all are charms against the toothache. In other parts of England there is a custom of calling the toothache the "love pain," for which the sufferer is not entitled to any commiseration. Whether he or she fully consents to this may, perhaps, be doubted.—Iron Times.

Information About False Teeth.

A young woman had just left a dentist's chair and was adjusting her wrap to leave, with several dollars' worth of gold in one of her incisors, when a reporter entered the office.

"What is the use of people enduring the agony of having their teeth filled when they can have them pulled without pain and then have a set of false teeth which will never trouble them again?" asked the reporter as the young lady gave a sigh of relief and left the office.

"Why, my dear young man, very few people can have a set of artificial teeth which will not trouble them. In nearly every case false teeth are very troublesome."

"That is when you do not get a good fit, I suppose?"

"It is difficult to get a perfect fit and have it remain so very long, because many mouths are continually changing. A plate that may fit well to-day may become unbearable in six months, and the plate may even break; in fact, they frequently do. I have several patients who must have new plates made every year or two, at the most, because their mouths change so much they cannot use a plate longer than that. Then there are other people who cannot endure a plate in their mouth at all, no matter how perfect the fit. They cannot become accustomed to them even after persistent trials. I have known men after trying a whole year to give up in disgust and resolve to gum it. So you see artificial teeth may be a continual expense and a great annoyance to a person. It is far better to have the natural teeth attended so, if they need a dentist's attention, but it is better still for every one to take proper care of their own teeth and preserve them as long as possible."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Language for Sacred Truths.

This custom of using an archaic tongue unfamiliar to people is very ancient, and prevails in various religions outside of Christianity throughout the world. There seems to be a deep rooted sentiment in human nature that sacred ceremonies should have a language apart, so that the multitude may not approach and profane that which is beyond and above their comprehension.

Within a few years a remarkable instance of this custom existing among a primitive people has been brought to light in the investigations of Mr. Frank Hamilton Cushing among the Zuni Indians of New Mexico. Mr. Cushing having discovered that the prayers and ceremonials used by the priests are in an ancient tongue which bears a relation to the Zuni of to-day similar to that of Anglo-Saxon to English. The remarkable thing about this is that the ancient language has been preserved orally, the Zuni having no method of writing, but so great is the veneration for the sacred tongue that it has been handed down from generation to generation without the change of a word. This illustrates the conservative value of a priesthood. Nearly, if not quite all, which the lingual science of to-day knows of the tongues of antiquity is due to this practice of preserving them for use in sacred offices.—Boston Herald.

The Fur Seal Asleep.

The sleep of the fur seal, seen on land, is always accompanied by an involuntary nervous, muscular twitching and slight shifting of the flippers, together with ever and anon quivering and uneasy rollings of the body, followed by a quick folding anew of the fore flippers, all of which may be signs, as it were, of their simply having a nightmare, or of sporting in a visionary way in some far off dreamland sea.

I have studied hundreds of such somnolent examples. Stealing softly up so close that I could lay my hands upon them from the point where I was sitting and watching the sleeping seals, I have always found their sleep to be of this nervous description. The respiration is short and rapid, but with no sound of breathing unless the ear is brought very close.—Our Arctic Products.

Luminous Military Maps.

Some interesting experiments have just been made at Aldershot, with a view to testing luminous paint as a medium for reading documents and studying maps at night. A few nights ago several noncommissioned officers of the Scots Greys, under Maj. W. E. James, started at midnight on a hazardous expedition, the object being to hold the canal and prevent the scouts of an opposing force, represented by another party under Lieut. C. S. Harris, from discovering the strength of the Aldershot division. The detachments had severally to make for and hold three positions—Deep Out bridge, Curzon bridge, and Pirbright and Cowshot bridges—finding their way thither by means of maps traced on transparent paper mounted on sheets of calico or linen cloth, which had been previously prepared with luminous paint. Although the night was very dark, these maps enabled the detachments to occupy their positions without mishap and just in time to prevent Lieut. Harris' scouts from crossing the canal. As the parties proceeded by prescribed routes, this result could hardly have been achieved without the assistance of the luminous maps; so the experiment is regarded as entirely successful.—Boston Transcript.

The Fair Planter of Louisiana.

At a recent meeting of the Louisiana Sugar Planters' association, Mrs. Amanda Delmas, of St. Mary's parish, was duly elected a member, with all rights and privileges which attach to the association, but to be permanently exempt from the payment of the customary fees and dues required from members. Mrs. Delmas is reported to be a most enlightened and efficient planter, superintending all the operations of working her own extensive plantation, in which she has been very successful. She is a Louisiana Creole lady, possessing all the best qualities of her race, and is a distinguished example of what a southern woman can do when left to her own resources.—Baltimore Sun.

The World from an Egg.

The ancient Finns believed that the world itself was developed from an egg, which a mystic bird laid in the lap of Vaimonou, who attempted to hatch it in his bosom. Accidentally, however, he let it fall into the water; when it was broken; the lower portion of the shell became the earth, the upper part the sky, the liquid white was transformed into the sun and the yolk into the moon, while the small fragments of scattered shell were changed into bright and glittering stars.—New York Journal.

A Big Operator's Generosity.

It has become fashionable for some to speak of Wall street men as thoroughly heartless. There is an impression held by many that the men in the financial center of the country are blind to everything and everybody but money. A reporter was chatting with one of the street's biggest operators in his office the other day, when a broker entered and said: "For heaven's sake give me $4,000 immediately. I must have it this minute. I needed $50,000 at noon, and have got all but the $4,000. I know I opposed your election as a member of the stock exchange, and I frankly admit that after your admission I said some mighty nasty things, but forget these personalities and help me. I only want the money for a short time." The big operator remarked in a genial way: "I am glad enough to help you, not only to show you that you went off the handle in fighting me (for what the Lord only knows), but to demonstrate to you that notwithstanding your remarks I feel that I am quite as manly as yourself." Was this a sucker? Perhaps so, but the big operator touched the bell button at his desk and directed that a check for the $4,000 be given to the visitor.—New York Sun.

A Monte Carlo Sensation.

I remember that during one of my visits, when the weather was exceptionally hot, a cab horse, after cantering up the hill of Monte Cristo, fell in a fit at the Casino door. It was necessary to kill the horse, and when the carcass had been removed some blood remained on the gravel. A few moments later a French newspaper correspondent came up, and perceiving the blood, immediately concluded that somebody must have committed suicide. The horror of the imaginative journalist was considerable intensified by the approach of a director of the Casino, who with greatest unconcern, walked on the blood stained sand, and unmoved entered the gaming rooms. A few hours later the press of most of the capitals of Europe re-echoed with the heartrending story of the young man who having lost in a few hours at roulette the entire fortune his father had taken a lifetime to accumulate, blew his brains out at the very doors of the Casino. But the directors, unmoved by the ruin they occasioned, actually trod in their victim's blood. Their consciences were so hardened by perpetual crime they had not even the decency to remove the blood with which their boots were bespattered.—Memphis Avalanche.

Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston.

Gen. Johnston would have made a good deal of a statesman had he received the proper training. His mind was quick to grasp a subject and his opinion on most matters sound and enlightened. He had been educated in the Calhoun school of politics, and his convictions were deep and conscientious in that direction. When called upon to command in Utah during the Mormon difficulties, he had a full understanding of the situation, and asked no favors from those people, although greatly deficient in some of his supplies, especially salt. He had no hesitation about sending into New Mexico in the dead of the winter of 1857-8 for the articles needed, and showed the Mormons how readily he could get on without their assistance.

Nothing daunted him, and when the Mormons sent him a present of salt for his own use he immediately returned it to them, although there was not a pound in his command, remarking at the same time that "he had not come there to be conciliated or bribed by them in any way whatever." He was determined that they should obey the laws and take no advantage of their having been in possession for years before. He acquitted himself to the satisfaction of the authorities, and was the only officer brevetted during the Utah expedition. He was made a brevet brigadier general Nov. 18, 1857, for "meritorious conduct and ability, zeal, energy and prudence displayed by him in command of the army in Utah."—Col. Brackett, Third U. S. Cavalry.

Locomotive Driving Wheels.

The diameter of locomotive driving wheels has been greatly increased to produce augmented speed. The largest yet noted are for a mammoth engine on one of the French roads. This locomotive has six coupled wheels eight and a quarter feet in diameter, and the tender and cars are to have wheels of the same dimensions, the calculation being that with such a train a speed of about seventy-eight miles an hour can be obtained. The cars will be swung inside and between several pairs of wheels.—Frank Leslie's.
